CLOSE BIDS FEATURE HIGH SCHOOL GENERAL CONTRACT CONTRACTORS

J. C. Bannister and the North Pacific Construction Co. Appear to Have the Big Work Lying Between Them on first Survey of Ail Estimates Received

TOTAL RETURNS ARE CAREFULLY CHECKED

Diversification of Specifications in Classification and Combinations Renders Decision of Board a Matter of Only a Few Days

The bids for the new high school have been opened and read an dtoday architects and school officials are checking the returns in the expectation of being able to ascertain by this evening to whom the general contract should be awarded under the provision of the law that it shall go to the lowest responsible bidder. At this writing it appears to lie between J. C. Bannister and the North Pacific Construction company, the lowest bidders.

The specifications were so diversified in their classifications and combinations and allowed for so many alternative bids, that until all these units are compared, it will not be possible to say who will win the contract.

The reading, which was done by Architect A. C. Austin, with Architect George Lindsay recording the figures, consumed considerable time because the bids received covered not only the general contract but also program clocks, electrical work, heating and ventilating, painting and plumbing, with various classifications and alternates.

All members of the board of trustees were present, viz.: Daniel Campbell, clerk, who read the purpose of the meeting; H. W. Yarrick, Dr. H. V. Brown, Mrs. Blanche Gardner, and Thomas D. Watson, who presided. Also present were Principal George U. Moysse, Vice Principal Mrs. Moysse and A. L. Ferguson, Business Manager Irving Oliver, and about fifty representatives of bidders.

The meeting took place at 2:15 in the music room and after Architect Austin had stated that it might be several days before the awards could be announced, the trustees went into executive session and delegated Mr. Moysse and the two architects to check the bids and reports at a meeting to be held tonight.

It was a very different audience from the usual assembly in the music department and until the doors were closed students who thronged the hall gazed with frank curiosity at the unusual group.

The first three bids to be made under the general contract were numbered 1, 2 and 3 and represented respectively the administration building, the science building, and the total bid for the general contract. The bids ran as follows:

North Pacific Construction company, administration, $355,500; science, $74,200; total, $429,000. J. C. Bannister, administration, $353,735; science, $79,035; total, $432,755.

Wopschall Brothers, administration, $380,671; science, $82,075; total, $459,900.

Edwards & Wilsey, administration, $383,400; science, $82,000; total, $465,400.

William Stacks, administration, $393,313; science, $83,313; total, $476,626.

Los Angeles Planning Mill company, administration, $393,896; science, $83,800; total, $477,646.

C. J. Kubach company, administration, $400,000; science, $92,900; total, $492,900.

Lawrence Burch Construction company, administration, $410,000; science, $90,000; total, $500,000.

METER DEPOSIT TO BE REQUIRED

New Ordinance Would Make Tenants Leave $2.50 at City Hall

An ordinance which makes it necessary for non-property owners and those who have not been on the books of the lighting department in good standing for one year to put up a deposit of at least $2.50 for each lighting meter installed or turned on in the city of Glendale, was passed by the Glendale city council Thursday night.

In other words, those who own the property at which the meter is to be installed and those who have paid their bills to the city regularly for one year will not be required to put up a deposit for meter connection or service.

This ordinance will go into effect Saturday, February 24.

GIRLS' LEAGUE TO BANQUET FOOTBALL TEAM OF HI SCHOOL

Every year the Girls' league of Glendale high gives a dinner to honor the football teams of the school. That dinner will be enjoyed tonight and members of the 'Alhambra team who will play the Glendale heavyweights in a basketball league game this afternoon, will be special guests.

There will be a special program of toasts and special decorations and favors. Helen Sherwood is chairman of arrangements for the Girls' League, and Fred Stoff for the football teams.

RED LETTER DAY DAWNS AT THE HIGH SCHOOL

Today is a red letter one at Glendale High with a most interesting program of events which include the election of officers of the Girls' League, basketball game with Alhambra's heavyweight team, banquet by the Girls' league for members of the football team, debate with San Diego's team this evening, and meeting of the Board of Trustees to award the contract for the building of the new high school on the campus at Broadway and Verdugo road.

BOARD OF EDUCATION AWAITS MAP

Will Show Extra School Territory to Be Petitioned

The board of education and school officials are now awaiting the receipt of maps and descriptions of the Glendale city school district which have been promised by the county engineer for today. They will show that there are three territories outside the corporate limits of Glendale which have always been a part of the Glendale district. But set the adoption of the city charter might have modified their status, the county counsel has advised that petitions be circulated therein to be signed by the heads of families, petitioning the board of county supervisors to annex them to Glendale for school purposes.

The maps are to be sent first to the county counsel, who will prepare the petitions and they will be circulated next week. Superintendent White believes it will be a brief affair and that the petitions will have an early hearing before the supervisors. The territories mentioned lie in Casa Verdugo, in Sycamore canyon and in the northwest.

Relative to the recently annexed territory along the river between the San Fernando road and Griffith park, which is in doubt, the county counsel now advises making it a separate precinct and then referring the votes to his office to determine whether they are valid or not. By the time the election has been held the decision of the superior court will probably have been made.

TIGERS VS. CUBS ENTER LISTS FOR FIGHT

A lively fracas is booked to ensue next Saturday afternoon when the Oxy Tigers will encounter the Cubs of the Southern Branch, with the purpose of snatching away the basketball honors. The battle will ensue on the Franklin floor.

Though the Cubs were victors last year, Occidental is sounding the war signal, and will not allow the honors to slip from her grasp, without a struggle. Most of the faith of the Cubs rests in two of her trusty players, Gigg and Eatan, at forward, who are familiar to followers of basketball in Southern California. A lively supporting line-up is destined to make the affair an interesting one.

Glendale Music club, it has been necessary to set the date for this musical event ahead one day. The concert will be on Wednesday evening, January 31, at 8:15 o'clock. STRENGTH OF REALTY IS TOLD

Dr. Harold J. Stonier Addresses the Realty Board on Ideals

MOTOR BUS REPORT

Chas. B. Guthrie Selected As Member of Directors for State Ass'n.

"The real estate business in California must be good," said Dr. Harold J. Stonier, executive secretary of the University of Southern California, at the meeting of the Glendale realty board Thursday noon.

Dr. Stonier continued: "Last year there were 32,000 real estate agents in California. This year there are 38,000. This is one for every 100 population in the state. The reason for this is that it is easy to get in the business and the revenue is great.

"Heretofore the real estate business has been a small business. There are so many units that it hasn't felt the pressure of the times as other lines have. The real estate men are now realizing as never before that their business must be brought into line. It is nothing now for a single real estate firm to have 100 to 150 men in its employ. In the larger firms there are all departments, such as real estate, insurance, rentals, etc.

"In the real estate profession as in any other line the big thing is education. If the real estate business is going to be lifted out of the 'game' class it will be done through education.

"Education will drive men out of the real estate business rather than make the number larger. There are thousands of men and women licensed in the real estate business who have no right there.

"The real estate man should have the last word when it comes to real estate matters. He should be looked upon as an authority in that particular line. He will be when the real estate business is on the same level as the banking business.

"The most vital thing to a man is his home. The real estate man is the fellow who is very often called upon to furnish the homes for those who want places of their own. He is the go-between. Education will put him in a position where he can select wisely for his client and so that he can protect both sides of the deal."

Mr. Bolen, chairman of the special motor bus committee, reported on the investigation of the motor bus proposition of C. D. Gulick. No recommendations were made in the matter. This committee was instructed to continue its work and look into the proposition of establishing municipal motor buses in Glendale.

The selection of Charles B. Guthrie as a member of the board of directors of the State Real Estate association was endorsed.

CITY ASSERTS CANYON WATER CO. CONTROL

Council Resolves to Buy No More Stock of That Concern

That no more stock in the Verdugo Canyon Water company be purchased by the city was the effect of the motion made by Councilman Davis at the meeting of the city council Thursday night.

Heretofore the city has been paying the stockholders in that company $5 for each share purchased, it being understood that each share bought carried with it a certain percentage of the Verdugo canyon water.

A controlling interest in the company is now owned by the city and for this reason it is deemed wise to purchase no more stock. The city now owns the company and therefore controls the water that is in Verdugo canyon.

AUTO ACCIDENTS

Automobiles operated by Joe Minto, Burbank, and W. E. Cowan, 324 North Central avenue, came together at 315 Ivy street at 11 o'clock Thursday morning. According to Mr. Minto the machine driven by Cowan ran into his car as it was standing at the curb. The front and rear fenders of the Minto car were damaged, a tire was destroyed, an axle was bent and a hub cap was knocked off.

GLENDALE POST DEFEATS HOST WITH BIG SCORE

The Glendale Legion Basketball team went to Whittier last night and won in easy style. In a roughhouse game the Glendale team with supreme good sportmanship refused to get excited and by a fine display of team work walked away with the heavy end of a 42 to 16 score. It never was pushed at any time.

On Monday night the team plays the High School faculty and the proceeds from the 25c admission will go to the high school.

Wednesday night will be a big night and a snappy game is a certainty as Glendale certainly has a formidable team. Pasadena is leading the field at present.

The original lineup was: Hayward and Wheelon, forwards; Bunker, center; Keller and Austin, guards.

In the second quarter Wheelon was replaced by Austin, who although a new man on the team, gave a wonderful display last night. Watt took his position the last half of the second quarter and was in turn replaced by Hibbard, when an injury sustained in a previous game made itself felt. Solano was also given a work-out at guard. Hayward, Bunker, Keller and Austin went the whole route.

Baskets—Hayward 8, Austin 5, Wheelon 4, Keller 2, Bunker. Of the numerous free throws Glendale scored only 2.

ROTARIANS HEAR EDUCATIONAL TALKS

Forty Attend Meeting Marked by Speeches on Ideals of Club

The regular luncheon meeting of the Glendale Rotary Club was held at the Chamber of Commerce auditorium Thursday, with President Roy L. Kent presiding. Forty members and a number of visiting Rotarians were present. Community singing was led by France Henry.

George U. Moysse, chairman of the educational committee, took charge of the meeting and called on various members of the club for short talks on the purpose of Rotary. Those who responded included: George B. Karr, on the manner in which the Rotary Club originated; Ernest Ford, why membership is limited to one member from each classification; George Bentley, interest in community work; Bill Hunter, time of meeting; France Henry, acquaintance-ship and fellowship; J. I. Wernette, regular attendance; Bill Howe, purpose of a Rotary Club; C. C. Cooper, duty of a Rotarian; Clarence Redmond, motto of Community Service.

The study of classifications was the particular study at yesterday's meeting. On Friday, February 9, Fred Deal of the Kiwanis club, is to give a demonstration of telephone systems and service at the meeting of that organization in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium, and an invitation was extended to the members of the Rotary Club to attend. The first anniversary meeting of the Glendale Rotary Club will be held the evening of March 9.

Val Hollister, president of Glendale Community Service; Richardson D. White and George B. Karr gave short talks on Community Service, calling the members attending to the purpose of the club held at the Chamber of Commerce auditorium on Monday night, January 29, for the purpose of completing the financing of a budget for this work in Glendale.

Visiting Rotarians who were present included Jack Habbick of Ventura; J. H. Fisher and J. C. Williams of Marshalltown, Iowa; N. J. Sindgren of Aberdeen, South Dakota; J. Will Johnson of Pueblo, Colorado; Robert H. Gannahan of Wilkesbarre, Pa.; Bill Kilgore of Los Angeles; G. Spencer Shimmam of Los Angeles.

It was voted that the Rotary Club donate $20 toward the Community Service dinner fund as the individual members of the club have already made reservations and donations.

There will be a change in the lineup from the last game. The manager is requesting all players not occupied Saturday afternoon to appear on the grounds at Park and San Fernando road for practice.

L. W. CHOBE HONORED BY THE CITY COUNCIL REPRESENTING GLENDALE

Designer of Our Peacock Is Given Purse of $385 and Silver Cigarette Case From City and Citizens Who Express Their Appreciation

MAYOR SPENCER ROBINSON MAKES SPEECH

Designer Pledges Service to the Future Boosting of the Community With More Designs; Shares Credit With His Workers

The appreciation of the people of Glendale for the excellent work done by L. W. Chobe in the designing of the various prize-winning floats which were entered by Glendale in the Pasadena Rose Tournament in years gone by was shown last night in the presentation to Mr. Chobe by Mayor Robinson of a beautiful sterling silver cigarette case and $385 in cash. Two hundred and eighty-five dollars were donated by various residents of the city and an additional $100 and the cigarette case were presented by the council.

In presenting the appreciation gift, Mayor Robinson said: "It is with a great deal of pleasure that I present to one of the leading boosters of this city a little token of appreciation and esteem.

A few people in Glendale realize that in Mr. Chobe we have a genius. It is through his efforts that Glendale has won six first prizes at the Pasadena Rose tournament. Last year we were given first award by everyone but the judges, and they came through later with a special cup. Mr. Chobe is a wonderful designer, and gifted artist, just as much as the prize winner who works in paints and oils.

"The friends of Mr. Chobe and of Glendale have collected $255 that they want to give to him to show, in a measure, that they appreciate his work. The names of the contributors are within this envelope so that he can see who appreciates what he has done. He can 'set 'em up' with the contents of this cigarette case if he so desires. This case is presented by the city of Glendale, and within it he will find a warrant for $100, also from the city.

"Jesse Smith, president of the chamber of commerce was to have delivered this speech, but he felt that he would not do it well enough so I had to help him out. I am only sorry that I cannot paint a word picture that will adequately express the appreciation of the people for the work of Mr. Chobe.

"The 1923 float has given Glendale wonderful advertising. That peacock has appeared in newspapers and magazines throughout the country. It has put Glendale on the map.

"Mr. Chobe, we are proud of you and of the work you have done. You are a real Glendalian, a regular booster for this city, and I take great pleasure in presenting these small tokens of esteem to you."

In response, Mr. Chobe said: "Mr. Mayor, city council and friends, I assure you that I feel proud in that you feel that my efforts are worthy of such unusual consideration. But earnestly, I appreciate greatly the sincere expressions, and to know that my feeble efforts have been so wonderfully appreciated, I know I do not deserve it. I cannot take all the credit of these wonderful floats to myself. Most of it is due to those who assisted me. It is through them that the wonderful effects have been achieved. Really, it is those workers who should be given the credit, instead of me.

"I appreciate everything you have done for me. I also am thankful for the opportunity of serving Glendale and Glendale people. Tonight I am as proud as the peacock that won first award at Pasadena on New Year's day. I am determined to keep on doing all I can toward the upbuilding and boosting of Glendale. If I can help to keep Glendale on the map I will be satisfied."

The ordinance as amended calls for the payment of $1 per square foot per year license, and a building permit of $2.

TRICKS OF THE KITCHEN RANGE ARE TAUGHT

A group of thirty or more women of Glendale are availing themselves of the opportunities offered "tricks of the kitchen" by attending the cooking and baking demonstrations being conducted four days a week at the Coker & Taylor plumbing store at 209 South Brand boulevard.

Mrs. H. S. Border of Glendale is instructor at these classes. For a number of years she has had active experience as a restaurant and hotel chef and is very competent as an instructor. At the Wednesday lesson those attending learned how to bake ideal Parker House rolls and sponge cake. The lesson today is on the proper way to bake bran bread so as to bring out all the healthful qualities in it. Among the kitchen "tricks" to be taken up will be how to make meringue stand up and also how to bake custard pies so the under crust will not be raw. Many housewives who are ideal cooks, otherwise, have difficulty with just such essential details as these, and they are finding Mrs. Border's instruction a real boon.

These lessons begin at 1:30 o'clock and last for about two hours. The days for the lessons are chosen at the class assemblies. The lessons are free and the users of the Lora heat control devices are particularly invited to attend. These devices are used on six makes of stoves, including the Direct Action.

Mrs. A. W. Bagley of Glendale and Miss McEligatt of Chicago were guests at a luncheon given Thursday at the home of Mrs. M. J. Brennan on Valley View road.

PRES. EASTMAN OF GL ENDALE STATE BANK, AND OF VERDUGO HILLS SCOUT COUNCIL SHOWING SCOUTS THE BANK'S VAULT

A. R. Eastman, president of the council and also of the Glendale State bank, showing Scouts the vault of his bank.

The Boy Scouts of the Verdugo Hills District are to be the guests of A. H. Lankford, Glendale Fire Chief, Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock, according to an announcement by the Chief this morning.

"The Boy Scouts can be a big help to the fire department if they are trained and understand the rudiments of the game," said Chief Lankford. "In many cities older scouts who have qualified for the merit badge in firemanship are organized into special boy scout fire corps and it is astonishing to see how efficient the boys become."

"I have been examining local scouts in the merit badge for firemanship and thus far every boy that has come before me showed that he had studied hard and had a very intelligent knowledge of the rudiments of fighting fire and better yet—the prevention of fire."

According to the chief, the scouts will be taken all through the Broadway Fire House and given an opportunity to see how fire alarms are turned in and recorded, going down the greased pole, how speed is attained in connecting the hose and all the odds and ends of the fire fighting game. Details of the big fire engines will be explained to the scouts and "we will end up by having our picture taken and then a ride down Broadway and Brand boulevard with the scouts on the big fire truck," he added.

AT THE THEATRES

"THE PRIDE OF PALOMAR" AT THE T. D. & L.

Peter B. Kyne's "Pride of Palomar," besides appearing in book form, ran as a serial in Cosmopolitan magazine. It is familiar to many thousands, and the announcement that it has been produced on the screen by Cosmopolitan Productions for Paramount is one which will greatly interest local picture fans. The picture comes to the T. D. & L. Theatre for two days commencing today.

To many also the fact that Frank Borzage who created "Humoresque" and other notable pictures, directed "The Pride of Palomar" will be an assurance of the high quality of this production.

The picture has a powerful theme. It deals with the struggle of a young Californian for possession of the family ranch in California against the father of the girl he loves. The girl, played by Marjorie Daw, has to face the consequences of her stand between her father and her lover, and it is absorbing and thrilling to see how she solves the problem.

Forrest Stanley and Miss Daw are the featured players of an all-star cast, which includes James Barrow, Joseph Dowling, Warner

"HUNGRY HEARTS" IS STUDY IN DIRECTION

It is difficult, after seeing "Hungry Hearts," the photoplay at the Glendale Theatre this week, to know whether the acting, the direction or the story itself should receive first mention. Each is of the highest order, and the combined result is one of those distinctly fine screen achievements that happen once in a decade.

The picture is an adaptation by Goldwyn of Anzia Zezierska's volume of short stories of New York life, published under the same title. The book created something of a sensation upon its publication two years ago, for a truer, more vivid picture of immigrant life has seldom been presented. In the process of transference to the screen the atmosphere of the original stories has been retained with remarkable fidelity by both the director, E. Mason Hopper, and the scenarist. "Hungry Hearts" is a dramatic, soul-stirring picture; but by no means is it all pathos and tears. Delightful humor abounds in both situations and titles, which were written in part by Montague Glass, creator of "Potash and Perlmutter."

TEXAS SENATOR MAY BE UNSEATED

Senator Sheppard and Senator Mayfield.

United States Senator Earle B. Mayfield of Texas, shown here with Senator Morris Sheppard of the same state, is to take office on March 4, but his early arrival in Washington has revived talk that efforts will be made to unseat him as soon as he is sworn in. According to Capitol gossip, the case will outrank the Newberry case, since Mayfield's election was based largely on the belief that he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, the backing of which organization he is supposed to have had.

THAT much thought should be given to the needs of the future of a city, and the life of the young people who will live to see the dreams of the present city-builders materialize.

THAT every citizen should be fully posted as to the natural and industrial resources of his community and at every opportunity should impart this information to visitors and others.

THAT no man stands by himself alone, but his success depends upon the support and cooperation of his fellow men.

THAT TO PATIENTLY, EARNESTLY, PURPOSEFULLY, GO AT EACH TASK FOR YOUR CITY WITH PLUCK, ENERGY AND PERSEVERANCE, IS THE DUTY OF EVERY CITIZEN.

GLENDAL IS WELL REPRESENTED AT REDONDO

The first district conference of Parent-Teacher Associations, held Thursday at Redondo Beach High school, was attended by eight representatives from the Glendale associations and delegation including Mrs. E. B. Moore, Mrs. E. B. Wyman, Mrs. A. H. Brown, Mrs. Pierson Hanning, Mrs. Mae Rosenberg, Mrs. R. C. Horner, Mrs. W. A. Kulp and Mrs. H. V. Henry. The session opened with a presidential conference, followed by a short parliamentary drill. The presidents of the district were urged that all associations celebrate what is called "Founders' Day" on February 17. This will be the twenty-sixth anniversary of the founding of the State Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations.

An interesting musical program was given by the girls' glee club of Redondo High school, and also several pipe organ solos by the students. The beach city school is equipped with a fine pipe organ. Another feature which attracted considerable attention among those attending the conference was the "Roman room" in the school. The interior of the room is to represent a Roman room, a fountain in the center and statue of Minerva. The foreign languages and Roman history is taught in this room, and the instructors in charge stated that the "atmosphere" provided by the room furnishings was making Latin more of a live language for the students than a dead language and that consequently there had been an unusually large demand for entrance in the classes. In this room is also celebrated the various Roman feast days.

Splendid speakers had been provided for presenting the topics of "Child Labor Law," "Community Property Bill" and "Scholarship." It was stated that during the past year the state association had used $8,000 for scholarships. The importance of choosing a good press chairman was the main feature of the talk on "Publicity." The members attending the conference were served luncheon in the school cafeteria.

CHARACTER ROUND TABLE TALK IS HELD

A round table discussion on the subject of "Character Building" took place at the regular meeting of the Glendale Intermediate Parent-Teacher association, held Thursday afternoon at the school with Mrs. W. C. Wattles, president, in charge. An executive board meeting was held at 2:30 o'clock, at which time it was decided that the association purchase a phonograph for the school. Beginning alphabetically, five members of the association are to have charge of a foot sale to be given at the next meeting. It was decided that these sales would be given in connection with the regular association meetings to raise money.

The flag salute was led by Miss Sharp, following which announcement was made of the Federation bazaar to be held at the high school on February 23, when the Glendale Intermediate and Pacific avenue schools will have charge of the pie booth. Mrs. Wattles requested that the room mothers make it a point to call on all the mothers of children of her room. A short talk on current events was given by Mr. McMasters, a teacher at the school.

Community singing of a number of the old American folk songs was very ably led by Mrs. John Cotton. The program was in charge of Mrs. Martinez, who led the round table discussion on "Character Building." Miss Sharp discussing it from the teacher's standpoint. A number of interesting views were expressed by the various members. Miss Sharp announced a play to be given by the Glendale Intermediate school students on Thursday, February 15, at the high school for the benefit of the athletic association. Mrs. Holman, registrar of voters was present, and Mrs. Wattles urged the members to register and vote in support of the school bonds at the coming election. She also spoke in regard to Glendale Community Service.

W. O. Huse of Glendale is visiting at the St. James Hotel, San Diego.

H. F. Croft of 1753 Gardena avenue has returned from a week's business trip to Lancaster, Mojave, Tehachapi and vicinity.

The story goes that Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin recently met in one of the moving picture studios. Said Charlie: "Mary, I don't like what you said about me in your book." "Why, what did I say?" questioned Mary. "Haven't you read it?" asked Charlie. "Oh, mercy, no," Mary replied. "I've a new play in rehearsal and I haven't had time. But by the way, somebody told me you panned me in your new book." "That so?" said Chaplin. "I'll have to read it and see."

But few people would know of your troubles if you knew enough to keep them under cover.

CORA WILL AND ARCHIE HOWES TO WED HERE

Prominent Science Practitioner to Marry on Saturday

Fraternities circles throughout Southern California are much interested in the announcement of the marriage next Saturday afternoon in the Little Church of the Flowers, Forest Lawn Memorial Park, Glendale, of Archie Milton Howes and Cora Gregory Will. The bride-to-be, who resides at 427 S. Hope street, Los Angeles, is a prominent Christian Science practitioner. She has been identified with Christian Science activities in that city for several years.

Mr. Howes, whose home is at present in Glendale, is nationally known as an organizer for the Knights of Pythias and is a member of the Pasadena Lodge of Elks. He holds a special commission in the Pythian lodge as Past Chief Deputy Grand Chancellor. At present he is engaged in the organization of several new Pythian lodges in San Diego county and is leading a state-wide movement to elevate the California Grand Domain from the ninth to sixth place among states throughout the nation in numbers of members. A concentrated six months' campaign has been launched for this purpose. The wedding, with the setting of the Little Church of the Flowers, a replica of the famous old church at Stoke Poges in England, around which the poet Keats wrote his immortal "Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard," as a background, will be a colorful affair. The matrons of honor will include sixteen members of the Pythian Sisters Momet Patrol, in full regalia. Both the bride and bridegroom will be clothed in uniforms of the order. Following the wedding ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Howes will leave for a short honeymoon. They will make their future home in Los Angeles.

Dainty Business Luncheon Is Held

The first of the weekly business luncheons to be served each Thursday from 11:30 o'clock until 1 by the members of St. Mark's Guild of the Episcopal Church at Harvard and Louise streets, was attended by over forty, despite the inclement weather. Mrs. Frank England, chairman of the hospitality committee, had charge of the luncheon and was assisted by Mrs. W. J. Farber and Mrs. E. B. Atwood. Following devotional exercises, the remainder of the afternoon was spent in needlework by the twenty-five members present. Mrs. A. Bassett is the guild president.

August J. Coleman of Edgemont, South Dakota, is visiting his brother and his family, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Coleman of 505 West Alexander street, and has already fallen in love with Southern California. He declares that from now on his vacation, will be spent here, in the "paradise of the United States of America," as he terms it. This is his first visit. He hopes to be able to return again soon.

UNKNOWN TAXI IS HONORED BY FRENCH

PARIS.—(By Mail).—The remains of an Unknown Taxi have been rolled into the historic Invalides and there enshrined for all time.

On the 7th of September, 1914, when the Germans were nearing the gates of Paris, hundreds of taxi-drivers volunteered to transport men to the front. Through one day and the following night a continuous stream of these tiny red cars made their way through shell-fire to the firing line. The reinforcements they brought probably saved the city from capture and France from defeat.

The taxis and their drivers became famous as the "Taxis of the Marne" and now after eight years the government has recognized their splendid service. One of the cars has been given a place of honor in the military museum.

A huge throng including prominent officials participated in the ceremony. Heads were bared and a guard of honor stood at attention as the battered taxi was moved to its final resting place.

ENJOY CASA VERDUGO PROGRAM

About 25 ladies enjoyed the excellent historical program presented at the meeting of the Women's Missionary society at the Casa Verdugo Methodist church, of which Mrs. Buckman, the president, had charge. A number of visitors were present and the session was followed by the serving of tea.

A man who delights in anecdotes of rustic life and character tells of an old farmer who once took tea with a former Duke and Duchess of Buccleugh at Drumlanrig castle, His Grace's Dumfriesshire estate.

His first cup of tea was swallowed almost immediately the duchess gave it to him. Again and again his cup was passed along to the head of the table. At the tenth cup the duchess grew uneasy about the supply on hand.

"How many cups do you take, David?" she asked.

"How many do ye gie?" David asked cannily.

COATS OF THE NEW YEAR AS SEEN IN N. Y.

Reduction in Sales of Furs Is Extending Over Country

BY HEDDA HOYT,
(United Press Fashion Editor)

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan. 26.—Reduction sales of furs are extending throughout the country just now and every woman is wondering what the styles of next year will be before buying.

Whenever there are great reductions on furs, we know that the furriers have distinct style changes up their sleeves.

This season's coats and capes have been rather voluminous, falling in full lines from shoulder to hem. The present French styles, however, are far more slender in silhouette than ours and we will undoubtedly be following their lines next season.

Already importers are showing advance models based upon French imports with long slender lines. It is presumed that the long skirt vogue will continue throughout the coming year, hence advance models all concentrate on the 51-inch length, with a decided tendency toward the narrow ankle line. In some cases the ankle line is so scant that inside straps and under linings are provided to make walking more comfortable.

Coats and dolmans are gaining over the cape for daytime wear. The cape with the side slits for the arms will probably remain staple for evening wear.

Collars for 1933 will be smaller especially on the extremely smart models where they are of the chin or turn-back variety.

Hem borders of fur are used on many of the latest models and are said to be the chief attractions of next season's coat.

The straight line coat which is belted is to be the popular type of silhouette for 1933. It may be varied by the use of the hip fastening, by hem borders of soft fur, such as kolinsky, fox or mink fur, or may be trimmed with odd shoulder appliques of fur but it will keep to the straight, slender silhouette.

Sleeves will be for the most part narrow at the shoulder and widening slightly at the wrist. Mink, ermine and squirrel will be used in narrow strips in patterns. The preference for brown furs will undoubtedly hold over throughout the coming year. Among them sable, mink, kolinsky, brown dyed squirrel and murrel are the leaders.

The short jacket of caracul and broadtail, which was popular this year among the flappers, is not considered strongly as an advance style.

Linings also are taking on a new importance and the plain lining has given way to printed silks, brocades and crepe de chine, bordered in novelty braids.

Batiked velvet also is used as a lining for some of the high-priced evening wraps.

Article No. 18

Informatory Double of a No Trump

The informative double of a bid of one No Trump was originally intended as a defense for second hand against a No Trump bid by dealer. Under such conditions, second hand might have enough strength for an original bid of one No Trump and yet not be strong enough to bid two No Trump; or have a strong suit but not strong enough to bid over the No Trump. These considerations gave the dealer a tremendous advantage and because of it, Major Patton suggested that second hand should double dealer's No Trump to show good all round strength and require partner to bid, even a weak four card suit. From this suggestion the present informative double has been developed until it now comprises a large part of the game as now played; and every Auction player must thoroughly master its principles. The requirements for a double of an original No Trump bid are very definite.

First: At least two and one-half quick tricks.

Second: Distributed in at least three suits.

Third: Strength enough to bid two No Trump or own suit if partner bids doubler's weak suit.

The first and second requirements should be familiar to the readers of these articles as they are the requirements for a third hand original No Trump bid, that is, two and one-half quick tricks distributed in at least three suits. The third requirement is the important one and the one that makes the double an interesting and difficult matter. Doubler's hand should not only be at least as strong as a third hand No Trump but also of such a character that doubler is prepared for any bid that his partner may make. It is practically impossible to hold a hand that will support any one of four suits, so the doubler must always be prepared for a possible bid by partner of his missing suit. By "prepared" is meant prepared to bid either his own suit, irrespective of whether it is a No Trump or his own suit. It already has been pointed out, in the article on Defensive Bids, that it is highly inadvisable to bid a strong suit over a No Trump bid on right. For that reason, second hand frequently doubles a No Trump bid with the firm intention of bidding his own suit, irrespective of whether it is a No Trump or his own suit. Such a double is made purely for the moral effect on opponents and always indicates a very strong suit and a fair chance for game. For example:

Hearts—A, K, Q, 10, 9, 6
Clubs—A, 10, 6, 2
Diamonds—K, 10
Spades—7

With this holding, second hand should double and subsequently bid the Heart suit irrespective of suit bid by partner. With this type of hand, the doubler is "prepared" for any bid by partner even a two Spade bid, as the hand is strong enough for a bid of three Hearts.

The following are good examples of sound doubles of an original No Trump bid by dealer:

Hearts—A, 10, 9, 8
Clubs—9, 6
Diamonds—K, Q, 6
Spades—K, J, 9, 7

Hearts—A, J, 8
Clubs—10, 4, 2
Diamonds—A, 10, 9, 7
Spades—K, J, 9

Hearts—Q, 10, 9, 6
Clubs—K, Q, 2
Diamonds—Q, J, 2
Spades—K, J, 10

Hearts—A, Q, 4, 2
Clubs—10, 7
Diamonds—K, J, 8, 7
Spades—A, J, 4

It is possible to hold hands containing two and one-half quick tricks, or even more, and still not have a sound double. For example:

Hearts—A, 4, 2
Clubs—A, 7, 6, 2
Diamonds—A, 8, 5, 3
Spades—10, 7

This hand contains three Aces and yet is not prepared for the Spade bid. It is not strong enough for a bid of two No Trump if partner bids two Spades.

Informative doubles without the requirements specified are, as a rule, losing bids. One of the worst features of weak doubles is that partner soon loses confidence in the player who indulges in them; and loss of confidence between partners is a very serious matter indeed. Play the game right and if you don't get the cards on one deal, you may the next; so wait for hands strong enough for sound bids or doubles. It pays to do so.

It should be noted that the above requirements are only for a double of a No Trump bid on right. For a double of a No Trump bid on left, hand should be at least half a quick trick stronger than that is, strong enough to justify a fourth hand original No Trump bid. For example:

Hearts—A, J, 7
Clubs—K, Q, 7, 6
Diamonds—A, Q, 9, 2
Spades—A, Q, 9, 2

Listening in on Eve

HER MORAL INFLUENCE

"There was a great discussion at the Wednesday Club today," began Mrs. Davis over her coffee. It was that pleasant interval at the end of a good dinner when married people exchange the news.

"That's unusual, isn't it?" queried her husband, lazily blowing rings of smoke. "Didn't Edna Bailey have to resign from the Wednesday Club because the doctor said she must avoid all excitement?"

Mrs. Davis ignored this as it deserved.

"This was a serious discussion, about a question of morals. The way things have been going on lately we felt it was up to us to take a stand of some kind."

"How do you mean—going on—exactly?"

"Oh, I don't know," Mrs. Davis was a trifle vague. "People, perfectly nice people that everybody knows and likes, do all sorts of things they wouldn't have dreamed of doing before the war and the Eighteenth Amendment. There are the new dances, of course—though they're not nearly as bad as they were a year or two ago, it seems to me. And the short skirts—but they are such a comfort. And all that dandelion wine that Mame Halsey made this spring—only Jimmy poured it out in the sink, because he was perfectly furious at her for smoking a cigarette at the Van Smelt's dance."

"He needn't have been," said Davis. "It made her deathly sick."

"I know. But he said that one thing led to another. It seemed a terrible waste—the wine, I mean—not the cigarette. All those dandelions! The Halsey children were picking for days! To say nothing of Mame's work."

"Well, what's the answer? Is the Wednesday Club going to lead a crusade against short skirts and dancing and dandelion wine?"

"How silly! Of course not. But about one thing we took definite action, and that was playing cards for money."

"I thought you played for a prize."

"So we did, for years. First we gave silver spoons. But people stopped using souvenir spoons ages ago. Then we tried miscellaneous prizes—only every one's taste is so different, and some of the girls returned theirs to the store, and the hostess's feelings were hurt. We finally fell back on silk stockings. Don't you remember? My size is 5, and I always won a 9 1/2 pair."

"Seems to me I do recollect something about that. Well, what happened next?"

"Finally we began to give a dollar bill each time, and let the winner buy anything she liked. It worked out beautifully. Sally keeps hers for taxi fare and Carrie puts hers in the baby's bank."

"A sensible arrangement. It seems to me," acknowledged Davis, "when I think of the junk you used to bring home."

"I felt that way about it myself," mused his wife, "until I heard about the scene at the Country Club last Friday. They've been giving a money prize there, too, and Mme. Burnett just put her foot down and said the place was no better than a gambling den, and no wonder the boys and girls carried on when their mothers set them such an example. Patsy Hoyne was dreadfully upset, and talked right back to her, and now the town is split wide open, with the liberals on one side of the fence and the conservatives on the other."

"Where does the Wednesday Club stand?" Davis wanted to know.

"Conservative, of course," said Mrs. Davis—a shade regretfully, perhaps. "We all have children to consider," she added, conscientiously. "Stella's going to the city tomorrow to get us a merchandise certificate from Pierce's. We'll give it as a prize instead of money."

"You'll need more than one, I should think, if you meet once a week," said her husband, rising to switch on the electric light, for the daylight had faded as they talked.

"No, for each member can sell it back to the club for its cash value if she wins it and prefers to take the money, and then we'll have it to give next time. Ted Davis! Are you laughing?"

"No," choked Davis, "I'm weeping with joy, dear. I'm so proud to have you a moral influence in the community."

Ladies' Aid Folks Are Entertained

Mrs. John Camphouse and Mrs. George H. Moore entertained with an afternoon tea Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Moore, 221 West Elk avenue, given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society of the Pacific avenue Methodist church. There were about thirty members and friends of the church. During the afternoon an interesting program was given, including bar pipe solos by Alex. MacDougall, in Scotch costume; Hindu songs by Mrs. Glenn Ogden, who with her husband is on a furlough from missionary work in India; readings by Mrs. Morrison. Refreshments were served on trays decorated with violets, suggestive of the spring season.

WOMEN'S JAIL RUN BY FEMALE

Alabama Takes Step in Advance of the Country

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 26.—A penal institution for women, overlooked throughout by women, with all of the attendant women, will be Alabama's 1933 contribution toward the furtherance of prison reforms in the United States.

Under direction of former Governor Thomas F. Kilby, an old penal building at Wetumka, one of the first buildings of Alabama's old penal system, has been renovated and fitted out as the woman's prison.

The building will be modern throughout. The old narrow, dark, brick-lined cells, in which women prisoners were formerly isolated at night, have been abolished. Not a brick is to be found on the inside of the jail. The old whipping post, which stood at the entrance of the dungeon room and the dungeon room itself have been abolished. Several thousand dollars has been spent in renovating the prison.

Mrs. Sarah E. Kirkpatrick, who has been engaged in work among women prisoners in Alabama for years, will be the superintendent. The only two male officials who will have anything to do with the administration of affairs in the building will be deputy warden, whose duties are outside the walls, and the prison physician.

A modern prison bakery, a clothing factory, where the women convicts will make prison uniforms, and a complete prison kitchen will make the penitentiary practically self-supporting.

THE TROUBLE WITH FRANCE

The Statistician Shows Why European Bonds Are Unsound

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass., Jan. 26.—Since the arrival of the British debt commission to the United States, Roger W. Babson has been making a study of the situation from a statistical point of view. His detailed conclusions are dry and uninteresting. The summary which he makes, however, is most enlightening.

"First, let us realize," says Mr. Babson, "that the coming to this country of Stanley Baldwin, British chancellor of the exchequer, Montague C. Norman, governor of Bank of England, and their associates from the greatest empire in the world, with hats in hand and begging for mercy, is one of the greatest events in our financial history. For centuries Great Britain has been the world's greatest creditor and all nations, including our own, have owed the British empire billions of dollars.

"The war turned the financial world upside down. Certain great nations like Germany, emerged bankrupt; France, the world's greatest investment nation emerged a debtor, while England, to whom everyone came for advice, now comes to Washington for help. Truly this is the most dramatic economic and financial event in the history of our nation. It also emphasizes the fact that we have a great financial responsibility as well as a great opportunity. Therefore, it is with this thought in mind that we must make our decisions.

"This whole question of reparation," continued Mr. Babson, "is bound up with sympathies, politics and national feeling. Owing to the latter, without doubt, a great many people in our country sympathize with Germany, and many others, through their love for Ireland, hate England. Frank study of the situation, however, should convince any disinterested party that Germany is in the position of a burglar who attempted a colossal steal but who was caught and defeated in his plans. Irrespective of the question of punishing this burglar, all must admit that he should make amends for the goods which he partly got away with and destroyed. France, therefore, should not be criticized for insisting that Germany restore, as far as possible, the property which was destroyed and damaged in her attempt to burglarize. Every disinterested party must admit that this is reasonable. France is asking of Germany only what anyone of us would ask of a neighbor who attempted the same thing in our community.

"The reason that France has recently lost sympathy in her negotiations with Germany is due to the fact that she is going at her problem in the wrong way. France's difficulty is that she is inconsistent. She wants a certain economic law apply to her but wants to suspend it in the case of Germany. Perhaps this is more or less true of all the allies, especially when they say that they cannot afford to pay their indebtedness to the United States. Yet when one looks at the statistics he finds that England, France, Italy, and all the allies combined owe the United States only about ten billion dollars, while they are demanding of Germany alone reparations of over thirty billion dollars! Of course, if Germany can pay any such amounts as France demands, there is absolutely no doubt but that England, France, and the rest of them, can very easily pay a smaller amount to the United States. President Harding and his cabinet, and all others who have looked into the matter evidently appreciate this situation.

"Up to the present time, England is the only one of the allies who has made an honest attempt to return any money to us. England is paying interest on its indebtedness while the other countries have sent us practically nothing. It is true that England has a commission here today pleading mercy; but we should be fair with England and recognize that she has made her payments thus far in accordance with her agreements. As to what we will eventually do with these foreign debts cannot be foretold at the present time. Certainly it would be useless to cancel them today and have these European nations go on another great spree or spend our money playing military poker. If, however, these nations would repent of their sins, disband their armies, and live honestly and decently, I believe the United States would be glad to cancel the indebtedness or do anything else which would truly help. On the surface, the difficulty with Europe is financial, but a statistical study shows very clearly that the real trouble with Europe is spiritual. Before we, or any other country can help Europe, the European nations must change their purposes, motives and attitude toward God and one another.

"Until this time comes I cannot advise anyone to buy or even hold European securities. After paying for the bare necessities of life Europe has a surplus which it can use either to maintain armies or pay interest on its indebtedness, but it has not surplus enough to do both. Europe is a good deal like the steamboat on the Mississippi which Abraham Lincoln used to tell about. The boiler capacity was enough to blow the whistle or to run the boat, but not enough to do both. When the whistle blew, the boat had to stop. At the present time Europe seems to desire to whistle rather than run. Until Europe changes its desires and puts its energies on running instead of whistling, wise investors will not hold European securities. On the other hand, I believe that when Europe quits squabbling and settles down to an honest effort to produce, these European securities will be perfectly good. This is true not only as to the money owed by Europe to the independent investors of this country, but it also applies to the ten billion dollars which are owed to the United States, because these debts all combined are less than France claims Germany alone is able to pay to her.

"This is why foreign exchanges are so little disturbed and business continues as good. Even the marching of French troops into Germany seems to affect our markets very

Present Ring Champions Lack Color

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—James J. Corbett, of all the former heavyweight title holders, perhaps had the most color, and he still retains it. His extreme popularity has kept him before the public years after he lost his title and has given him a most comfortable living on the stage.

Corbett, Jack Johnson and Jess Willard were at the ringside for a heavyweight contest in Madison Square Garden recently and Corbett was easily the biggest one of the three.

Johnson, had he not chosen notoriety for popularity, might still be a big figure in the ring world. He had a lot of color in his day, but his mistakes ruined him.

Willard never was popular. He always was of a sort of sour disposition and always gave the impression that he was about to bark when he was approached. His attitude has changed somewhat since he dropped the title and there may be a reason why he ties to be pleasant now.

Jeffries was a bear in disposition and he was never a popular public figure outside of ring circles. "John L." had a lot of color and so did Bob Fitzsimmons, but they have passed out of the picture. Jack Dempsey might have been the most popular of all the heavyweight champions. He might have made an undying name for himself had he been inclined differently in 1917. As long as Dempsey lives, however, his war record will be held against him and it will go down on the books after he has gone.

Taken as a whole, the present bunch of champions are a colorless lot.

Dempsey and Benny Leonard seem more anxious to become champions of the stage than hero kings of the ring.

Johnny Wilson and Johnny Kilbane are faded out from a long period of hiding away from the spotlight.

Mickey Walker at present is merely tolerated and not considered as much of a champion, through the general belief that he is to be "taken" the first time he meets a good welterweight.

Joe Lynch had the makings of becoming a popular champion, until he started doing things that his friends bet he wouldn't do.

Little Pancho Villa, the flyweight title holder, is the only colorful one of the bunch and he is no eye-knocker. He does give a show every time he gets in the ring and he is in there plenty.

little. The Babson chart now above the X-Y line indicates that general business stands at 2 per cent above normal, which is very good for this time of year. From the headlines in the papers, one would think Europe is going to smash, and England into bankruptcy. Do not fear—when Europe sees the error of its way and becomes sensible, it will come back very rapidly. In the meantime," concluded Mr. Babson, "we are showing wisdom by sitting tight."

GLENDAL NIGHT STARTS TUESDAY ON TIMES RADIO

Far Flung Fans to Hear
Local Artists Over
Many Miles

Radio fans throughout the United States are looking forward to enjoying "Glendale Night," which has been announced for Tuesday, January 30. Approximately 1,000,000 people in the United States and Canada will "listen in" when Glendale talent goes "on the air" Tuesday night from 8 o'clock until 9:30 from the Los Angeles Times broadcast station. This should prove to be another splendid means of advertising the "fastest growing city in America," which has already attracted the attention of hundreds of thousands through the publicity gained by the prize winning floats entered at the Pasadena Tournament of Roses parade.

A splendid program has been arranged by Harry A. James, who also states that it is his opinion that Glendale will receive as much publicity from this event as was received through the Peacock float. Already announcement has been broadcasted regarding "Glendale night" and radio fans have jotted the date in their log books and are anxiously awaiting the entertainment.

The following artists, all of whom are residents of Glendale, will take part in the program:

Nevin Quartet—Mrs. Charles A. Parker, Mrs. Frank N. Arnold, Mrs. A. M. Draper and Mrs. John Cole.
Duets and solos—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Girard.

Piano numbers—Mrs. Phoebe Armstrong Marlenee,
Soprano solos—Flora Phyllis Kilpatrick.
Scotch songs—Francis J. W. Henry.

Monologues and stories—Harry A. James.
Accompanists—Miss Gertrude Champlain and Frances A. Grant.
Remember the time, Tuesday night, January 30, from 8 o'clock to 9:30.

AMERICAN TROOPS RECALLED FROM RHINE

Maj. Gen. H. T. Allen

As a kind of protest against French invasion of the Ruhr district, President Harding has ordered Major General Henry T. Allen, commanding the American troops at Coblenz bridgehead, on the Rhine, to return with his men to America. These troops are taking their last look at Ehrenbreitstein, on a huge rock near Coblenz, once Germany's greatest fortress, which they have been occupying.

WOMEN LEADERS AT NATIONAL REPUBLICAN CLUB LUNCHEON

The Once Over

BY H. I. PHILLIPS

TODAY'S TOPIC: "EMBASSIES"
Now, children, we will take up the morning lesson. Today's topic is embassies. Now, what is an embassy? Right, Willie, an embassy is a place where great quantities of good liquor are stored.

Why is an embassy a place where liquor is stored? Because it is one of the few places liquor may be legally stored under the prohibition act. The reason for this is that no matter how you construe the Monroe Doctrine you can't make it stop an ambassador from drinking if he wishes to. This is the only thing not covered by the doctrine.

Yes, Arthur, most ambassadors always have drunk more or less, but not enough to keep them from being taken seriously. Today the world of diplomacy is in such a depressing state that an ambassador is not taken seriously anyhow and he might as well be drunk as anything else. In fact, some people have come to think that diplomacy is something you do with a quart bottle.

And after looking at what a wreck diplomats have made of the world there is ground for thinking it is something that is done with a five-gallon jug.

Why does a member of an embassy wear a high silk hat? That's correct, Alice: Because you can invert a silk hat, put a handle on it, and have a very wonderful two-quart container.

What is a synonym for "ambassador," children? "Locker," of course. Go to the head of the class, Freddie!

Now let us take up the next question: What's the difference between an embassy and a rum ship? No difference, children, except that an embassy is more helpless on water.

How does a foreign government go about selecting a representative to Washington? Like this, children: It simply deliberates carefully whether to send a man or just case goods. Yes, Clement, you've gotta admit that the liquor that has leaked out from the embassies here has been so darned good it has done more to establish permanent friendly relations between America and Europe than any diplomatic action in 200 years.

If Europe would send us fewer diplomats and more whiskey there would be less talk of war.

An entangling alliance is all right if it comes in a bottle.

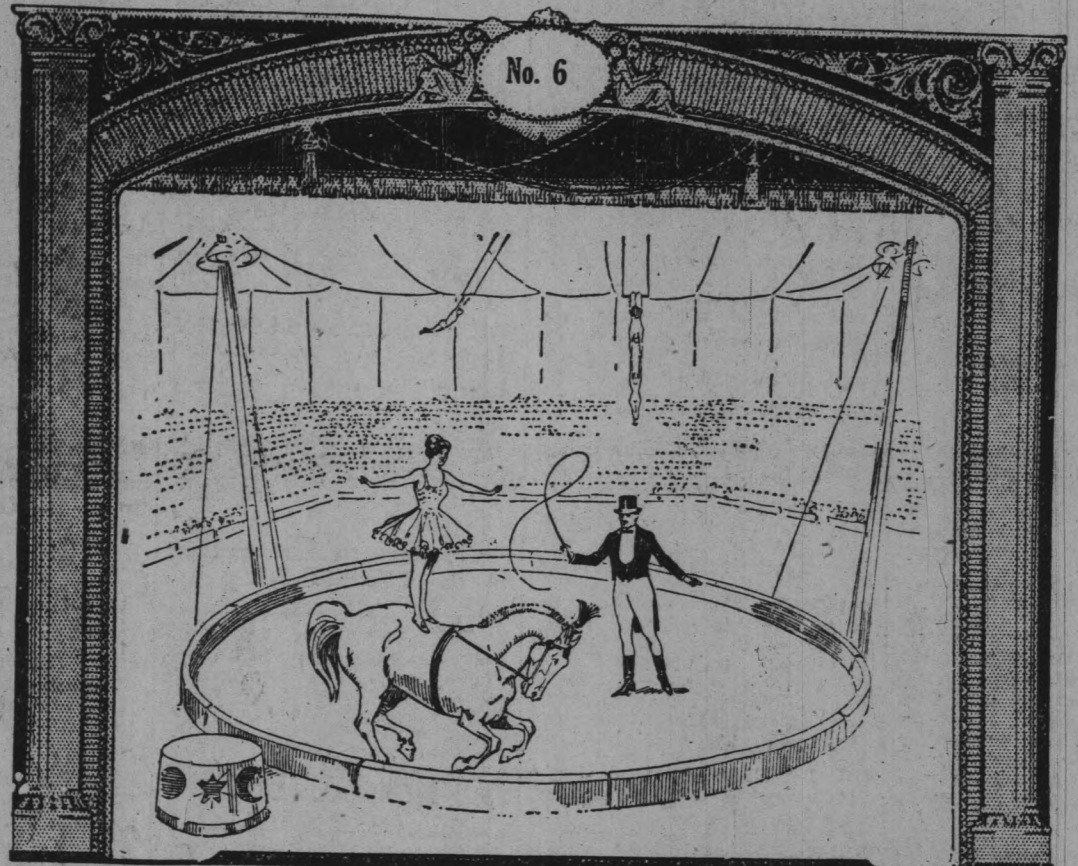

Should anything be done about the embassy leakage? That's a matter of opinion. The only plausible suggestion is that all ambassadors be obliged to set up their offices outside the three-mile limit.

What's that, Eddie? Is it hard to get into the diplomatic service? Oh, no. No, indeed. It used to be, but since the liquor exposure was made, bartenders are rushing to enter it from all over the country.

The class will now sing "Blessed Be the Ryes that Bind."

OBSERVATIONS

BY A GLENDALE OLD TIMER

I have never had any connection with the business end of a chamber of commerce, but I've had some business experience and it is my candid opinion that our local chamber, and, in fact, any city's organization of this character, can obtain greater results from the indirect advertising of the city's newspapers than from any other source. I believe the New Year editions of the two Glendale newspapers gave this city more genuine advertising than all the booklets that have ever been sent out, no matter how beautiful and highly colored they were. And the reason is that most of these papers that were mailed out, and that means thousands, went to relatives and friends of Glendale people, persons whom said Glendale residents are trying to induce to locate here, and this counts. I believe that the Glendale chamber of commerce should encourage all residents of the city to list in the office the names and addresses of people they think may be induced to locate and invest here and from time to time the secretary should mail them copies of Glendale papers containing references to building projects, plans for beautifying and improving the city, and descriptions of our wonderfully beautiful environment, not surpassed by any city in the world. These are everyday items in our local papers, particularly the Glendale Daily Press, and they count for vastly more than illuminated booklets, which are looked upon with suspicion as to their genuineness by many people in the east.

A popular, and, to my mind, reprehensible practice in some California cities is that of giving public warning that certain laws are to be enforced. Laws are intended to be enforced at once upon their becoming effective and no warning should be given, for in most cases those who violate said laws do it deliberately, with full understanding of the penalties but with hope of escaping detection and punishment. One of our neighboring city councils recently decreed that notice boards should be placed conspicuously at street entrances of the town, conveying the information that traffic laws would be strictly enforced therein. Nearly every motorist knows the laws and those who do not should not be allowed at the steering wheel. Why not enforce all laws without fear or favor without warning would be violators of such purpose? Another of our neighbors has warned business houses that they will be prosecuted if they do not remove such paraphernalia by Jan. 31. Laws against gambling have been on the statute books for many years and any violator should be arrested instantly and punished, instead of being given warning to cease his defiance of the laws. What would you think of a city, county or state that would warn citizens that laws against murder would be enforced after a certain date? Yet this would be no more ridiculous than warning of the intended enforcement of laws against gambling and speeding. It is our American habit of wishing to obey only the laws that suit our convenience and of enforcing only those not unpopular with the people, that cause us to be known as the nation with more crimes of all kinds per capita than any other on the face of the globe.

It seems strange to me that so many of our merchants are victimized by the passers of bad checks. I would think that it would be an iron-clad rule of every business man that no check should be accepted from a person unknown to the proprietor or one or more of the salespeople. True, the stores might miss a few good sales by applying such a rule, but they would avoid any chance of loss from the operations of bad check artists. The fact that one woman swindled the merchants of Glendale out of $300 or more by means of 11 worthless checks, is astounding, and should prompt an immediate reform in business procedure. The banks will not cash a check for an unidentified person. Why should a merchant do so?

A lover of good movie shows was complaining to Old Timer about the way scenario writers misrepresent a book they are granted the right to dramatize. He was especially indignant over the mutilating of Quincy Adams Sawyer, a book he dearly loves and which he hoped to see portrayed on the screen. But to his disgust about the only part of the book that he recognized was the title. He said Quincy was not at all the character the book represents and that he used a term never heard of until the world war; Alice Pettengill is an orphan and Quincy saw her first at her home, instead of in Boston; Deacon Mason and Huldah, also Tilly James, important characters, are eliminated entirely; two characters were introduced, Deacon Pettengill and Betsy Ann Ross; Obadiah Strout in the book is merely a puffed-up singing school teacher and would be general factotum, instead of the scheming villain the play depicts him as; his gossip, faithful henchman and driver of the village bus, Abner Stiles, is transferred into a brawny blacksmith, murderer and all-around villain; Lindy Putnam, ambitious, weary of her environment, yet submissive to her virago adopted mother, is transformed into a silly vamp, while the forsworn mother, Mrs. Hepzibah Putnam becomes a meek, much-abused parent to the unprincipled "born" daughter so ingeniously given her by the scenario writer. Hiram Maxwell, Mandy Skinner and Samantha Green are merely caricatures in the play. But, worst treason of all to the book and its author, according to my disgusted friend, an entire section of the rushing, turbulent Columbia river, including a dangerous cataract, is transported bodily from Oregon to this placid New England village of Mason's Corner, near Boston, to furnish a scene not in the book nor even hinted at by the author. This, however, furnishes the real thrill of the play, and stage settings and all the acting is simply superb, but just the same it isn't Quincy Adams Sawyer, is the contention of my friend. But he merely voices a complaint often heard that it is impossible to dramatize much less film, any book and retain all or generally a major part of the characters and scenes. I remember that when I saw James O'Neill in Monte Cristo, about 35 years ago, I was greatly disappointed at the many changes that were necessarily made in adapting for the stage that beloved book of my boyhood reading. And I was thoroughly disgusted when the audience broke into laughter at one of the tense moments of the play, when Edmond Dantes, masquerading as Count of Monte Cristo, hurled at the cringing Montego the stern words, "You have got to die." The only play I ever saw that conformed almost exactly to the words and scenes of the book, was "Cricket on the Hearth." Joseph Jefferson played the role of Caleb Plummer, the old toy maker and the drama was intensely interesting throughout.

Do you know that cane sugar made in Hawaii wholesales for the same price in the eastern states, even those bordering the Atlantic, as in California, and cane sugar made in Cuba or Louisiana, wholesales at the same price on this coast as in the place of refining? California and Colorado beet sugar carry the same wholesale price in New York City as in Los Angeles or Denver. All this is regardless of freight rates and because the various sugar trusts, working together, decree such a system to save themselves from losses in competition. By all economic laws California sugar should sell for at least one dollar a hundred less here than in New York and that sum is the tribute paid by consumers to these iniquitous trusts. Also Kansas wheat sells in Los Angeles, wholesale, at the same rate as California wheat, though it costs 88 cents a hundred freight to get it here, while from the wheat fields of California the rate is about a third of that, or less. This system of freight equalization, worked out by Big Business for its own protection and profit, takes millions of dollars a year from the pockets of consumers. Is it just, think you?

I imagine I hear some disgusted reader of this column exclaim, on perusing this or that statement, "Why, I knew that myself. He needn't think that is news to me." I know that, dear reader. But, just remember Opie Read's declaration in "Old Ebenezer," of the function of a newspaper. He said, "It is not so much to tell you what you don't know as to remind you of what you do know." So, if I but succeed in bringing to your memory some of the things you once knew, I'll be content, even if I do not succeed in adding to your knowledge.

When I get to the state legislature or congress, I am going to introduce on the first day, if it is possible to do so, an anti-perjury bill. It will provide a new form for the oath witnesses in all court trials must take and said oath will be in form as follows: "I solemnly swear that I will tell the truth, the whole truth (insofar as the opposing lawyers and the presiding judge will allow me) and nothing but the truth. In very few trials is any witness allowed to tell the whole truth. He is generally very carefully coached in advance by one lawyer or set of lawyers as to what to refrain from saying, and the opposing attorneys, assisted by the judge, limit him as far as possible in saying what he knows that will most damage their side of the case. So the witness is forced to perjure himself because he is not allowed to tell the whole truth and is, often badgered by a particularly insulting lawyer into telling some things that are not the truth.

I most certainly agree with the Exchange club in its campaign for the reduction of the water meter installation charge of $30 to half that sum or less for I think the present rate is an unmerciful gouge that has put our city in bad odor with new builders and probably driven some of them away. I would go a step further and demand the reduction of the amounts demanded for moving houses. It costs as much for a permit to move a $1000 house as it does for one to build a $40,000 mansion. Twenty-five dollars for a permit to move a house that is more than 14 feet wide and $100 to move one above a certain minimum, looks to me to be far beyond the bounds of reason, especially as nearly every removal means a new house built where the old one stood and the repair of the one moved, which calls for two building permits. This moving permit is not to create a fund from which streets are damaged in the moving will be repaired. A deposit of from $25 to several hundred dollars is required for that purpose.

Do You Ever Think of the Future?

YESTERDAY is gone, today is here, but what about the future? Are you ready to meet certain conditions when they arrive? Have you provided a family burial plot?

A purchase of this kind should be an expense incurred but once in the history of the family.

You owe it to yourself and family to make this provision before actual need arises. Don't wait until you are forced to buy. Don't pass the responsibility of selecting a plot to some friend. Plots selected by friends, at a time of disaster, are rarely, if ever, entirely satisfactory and in harmony with all of the family.

You should, in justice to yourself and family, give a thought to the future and wisely provide a suitable burial plot in advance of any real need and at a time when your mind is free from distress.

THE VARYING WEATHERCOCK

Senator Borah above all other public men, possibly with a single exception, has raised his voice against any intervention in the concerns of Europe. He has wanted the United States to be kept a thing apart and aloof, a splendid solitude alien to every interest on earth save its own. The impossibility of such a course, its unspeakable arrogance, and its measureless greed, seem never to have occurred to his mind.

It is probable that had not the base idealism of Borah prevailed, by the assistance of some colleagues, and un-American Americans in civil life, the turmoil that now perturbs Europe, and threatens to plunge it into war, never could have arisen. In declining any responsibility whatever, this country accepted a responsibility most dire.

But Borah has changed his tune. A question naturally arises as to his motive. Perhaps it makes some difference to him whose ox is being gored. He is inconsistent. When Germany was refusing to make effort to meet its reparation pledges, and was sneering at the suggestion that continued obduracy might lead to drastic means, Borah was calm; that is, was calm for him. He bellowed much, it is true, but the note of agony had disappeared from his tones. It was none of the business of the United States what Germany did, or any other power over there might do. None whatever. Hands off! This stuff found an echo in the Hearst press. It was the continual inspiration to such brainfornished intelligences as Brisbane, and they emitted hysterical whoops.

The situation changed. When France invaded Germany for the purpose of collecting a collectable part of the debt, the aspect, once a matter of indifference to the Borahs of the land, assumed poignant interest. All at once it became pressingly, acutely, the affair of the aloof and solitary country that was not to care a tinker's dam about anything.

Strange? Not a bit. A mere exposure of the Borahs. Nothing more. A lot of windy pretenders forced into the open. That's all.

PRISON REFORM TALK

Louis Victor Eyttinge, late a life term convict, has since his release been talking abundantly concerning the iniquity and the futility of the prison system. Doubtless he knows much concerning the subject, and yet his tendency to get into the spotlight may be questioned on the score of taste. In a sense, he is a poor illustration of his doctrine. He went into the prison weighing 114 pounds, apparently about to die of consumption. He had a bad record. Concerning the crime of which he had been guilty there was nothing to be said as softening its meanness and ferocity. After fifteen years in prison he emerges in fine health with the poundage of an athlete, accepts a $10,000 position, gets married, and devotes much of his energy to denouncing the system that was the only thing saving him from death as a hunted outlaw. So much for that.

Many prison reforms are needed. In a large proportion of the institutions these reforms have become part of the routine. The policy of treating prisoners brutally has been abolished, partly that it is known to be productive of evil; partly that a better class of men are in charge; partly that criminologists, having given the subject deep attention, have pointed to the value of humane treatment. Prisoners no longer are regarded as utter social waste, but as potentially good citizens. They are given educational opportunities, and such quality of honor as remains in them is cultivated, trusted and encouraged.

All this does not mean that the person who cuts a throat or robs a widow has earned the right to be regarded as a pet, and to be placed in the midst of delights far more alluring than he might have known outside.

ABUSING AN ANGEL

Mrs. Angela Kaufman, a widow of large means, has been mentioned many times as an angel of mercy, by prisoners whom she has aided substantially. Inspired doubtless by high motives, it has been her wont to regard every person accused of crime as innocent and oppressed, or at least as so unfortunate as to deserve escape from penalty. It is much to be regretted that while some prisoners have regarded her as an angel, others have taken advantage of her, regarding her only as an "easy mark." She has been robbed by those whom she has helped. Ex-prisoners have visited her with moving tales, and departed with portable property. One man whom she had saved from prosecution by the simple method of making good his worthless checks, is at this writing in jail charged with having made a brutal assault upon her.

It would seem that the theory that people who follow a criminal career do so because forced to it by circumstances, is not without flaws. This good woman of course is at liberty to pursue her own bent, but if the bent remains exactly as heretofore, she must be singularly set in her ways. The instance is cited not as unique individually, but as one illustrative of a type. Even if this particular angel of the jails fails to get any benefit from her lesson, there are others who might well give it heed.

One more faithful Los Angeles policeman has been killed by a bandit. The list grows long. It is about time to come to a show-down as to whether the underworld really is to run things for an indefinite period.

AN EXPANDING COMMUNITY

The fact that in building operations for 1922 Los Angeles stood third among the cities of the United States is a satisfaction to local pride. It is far more than this, however. To any one interested in the trend of industry, the development of one part of the country as compared with another, the course of shifting population, the figures must be a revelation. When a city ranking by the census of 1920, tenth in the number of residents, does more building than any but the largest two on the list, there is a significance to the report.

The area around Los Angeles partakes of the degree of prosperity indicated by the growth in the municipal center. All about Los Angeles, at the beaches and towards the hills, there are cities, among them those approaching the dignity of the first class. It is probable that in a short term of years these will be embraced in a single organization, the growth of each towards Los Angeles and of Los Angeles towards it, coming into actual contact. In several of these adjacent municipalities the building has been greater in proportion than in the case of Los Angeles.

Ever since the gloomy business days that followed the post-war boom, when this was the only community that seemed immune to adversity, but continued to increase and prosper, southern California became known as the white spot on the financial map. It still maintains its right to that title.

MAKING MONEY STABLE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Money will never be stable in any part of the world until it is stable all over the world.

Like a great many other blessings a non-fluctuating currency waits on world government.

Until the nations of the world get together in some kind of an agreement and arrange their international differences in a different way from the idiotic method that has been pursued up to the present time no currency will ever be stable anywhere.

We all know what has happened to the mark, the lira, and the franc. What we do not realize is that the dollar has also suffered, and that the dollar today is worth only about 65 per cent of what it was before the war.

It is not gold nor any other metal or commodity that can be taken as a universal standard of value.

One reason is, there is not enough of gold, and the other reason is, that the quantity fluctuates. The fact that no nation by itself can secure stable currency is illustrated by what is going on now in Germany.

The press reports say that foreigners are buying up all the available property in Berlin. Business and dwelling houses have been bought by non-Germans at ridiculously low prices. This is because German money is no good even inside of Germany when it has to compete with foreign money.

A fluctuating currency takes away all incentive to thrift, for nobody wants to save unless he can be assured that his savings will retain their worth. And whatever kills thrift kills capital.

When the nations of the world get together, then for the first time in history they will not only stop war, but they will be in a position to stop panics and the other disasters that flow from fluctuating money.

An international financial unit agreed to by all the nations of the world would realize the fondest dreams of the greenbacker and the fiat money advocate. For international currency supported and guaranteed by all the governments of the world would not only not have to be redeemed in gold, nobody would want it redeemed.

It is generally said that fiat money in the United States would be a delusion, but it is not generally understood why it would be a delusion. The reason is that there are other countries. If the United States included the whole world fiat money would be no delusion, but the very soundest of currencies.

So the business, the industry, and the prosperity of the world awaits the League of Nations.

THE RIGHT WORD

By W. CURTIS NICHOLSON

The "Jones and Me" Sentence Synopsis: "The Right Word" asserted that the subject of an infinitive is always in the objective case and that therefore Mr. Jones and me were the subject of the infinitive to talk over in the following sentence: It would be better for Mr. Jones and me to talk the matter over. Miss Hahn replied, taking issue with "The Right Word," and asserting that Mr. Jones and me were the object of for, and that the sentence was virtually, "To talk the matter over would be better for Mr. Jones and me." Whereupon "The Right Word" maintained its point, stating that the sentence was virtually, "For Mr. Jones and me to talk the matter over would be better," the subject being "For Mr. Jones and me to talk the matter over."

M. F.: "Miss Hahn's method of analyzing the 'Jones and me' sentence takes unwarrantable liberties with the meaning. She is quite wrong and you were and are quite right. The sentence definitely states that Jones and the speaker are to do the talking, but does not of necessity mean that they are the ones for whom it will be better. Miss Hahn's sentence does not state definitely who is to do the talking, but does state definitely that Jones and the speaker are the ones to be benefited; a meaning almost opposite to that of the original sentence. For must be thought of as introducing the whole infinitive phrase."

Sara Jay: "In the sentence 'It would be better for us to talk it over,' the object of for is all that follows it, namely, 'us to talk it over.' Us then must be the subject of the infinitive to talk over. By analogy, Mr. Jones and me, which is equivalent to us must be the compound subject of to talk over, and therefore in the objective case."

Val. Mattern: "In the concluding paragraph of your reply to Miss Hahn you state, '... still maintains that me is in the objective case because it is the subject of the infinitive to talk over.' Will you please let me know how a subject can be in the objective case?"

Mr. Nicholson: "The only time that a subject is in the objective case is when it is the subject of an infinitive; as, I told him to go (that which was told was him to go; in other words, you go). One might say, 'I told you go, and then you would be in the nominative case; but such an expression is not good English. Him to go is equivalent to you go, and him is in the objective case, subject of the infinitive to go. Apply this explanation to the 'Mr. Jones and me' sentence."

THE LISTENING POST

By JAMES W. FOLEY

"Every day in every way"—You have heard it, of course. It may be you have said it.

And if it did not do you any good it did not do you any harm perhaps. And it was better for those about you that you rejoiced than that you complained.

Whether or not you grew better because you declared it is something for you to figure out for yourself. But at least if you declared you were better, people about you did not have to listen to grumbings.

And that was in itself beneficial. You spared yourself and others the pains of fret and complaint.

There is a lot of things that have been understood by a great many persons for a long time. Among them the fact that the world is round. That the law of gravitation defines the fall of bodies to the earth. That the magnetic pole attracts the needle in the compass. That eclipses can be timed.

And so it is a pretty well defined fact that a friendly and cheerful outlook upon life is better than a morbid and unfriendly one. It is pretty well understood that fear-hatred, and kindred emotions are evil.

For they disturb the functioning of the body. They promote the secretion of poisons within the system. A fit of rage or violent hatred will produce headache. Because the systemic functioning has been disturbed.

The truth of living is not in mumbling phrases. It is not in too much introspection. It is not in too much retrospection. It is in life and work and helpfulness and all that.

Every day that in every way you do what kind and helpful thing you can for the world, you may be sure you are getting better and better. And the world will be getting better and better, too.

It is a pretty good thing instead of dwelling too much upon yourself and your ailments and aches and pains, to seek to forget yourself. And to remember the need there is about you.

The work to be done. The flowers to plant. And that will make you and the world better and better.

Songs of the Poets

Sailor's Song—By Thomas L. Beddoes

To sea, to sea! The calm is o'er;
The wanton waters leap in sport;
And rattle down the pebbly shore;
The dolphin wheels, the sea-cows snort,
And unseem mermaids' early song
Comes bubbling up, the weeds among.
Fling broad the sail, dig deep the oar;
To sea, to sea! The calm is o'er.

To sea, to sea! Our white-winged bark
Shall billow cleave its sunny way,
And with its shadow, fleet and dark
Break the caved Tritons' azure day.
Like mighty eagle soaring light
O'er antelopes on Alpine height.
The anchor heaves, the ship swings free,
The sails swell full. To sea, to sea!

THE HUMAN MALE AND THE COLOR SCHEME

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

In the animal kingdom it is the male that takes to brilliant colors.

I am assuming, of course, that many of my readers refuse to admit that man should be classed as an animal, so he is not included in the list of the creatures that love color.

Man takes to blacks, grays or dark blues because his tailor tells him they are modish; and then he raises merry Ned because his wife wants a gay gown, say cherry, orange or peacock blue. I've just heard a conservative business man reprove his wife for wearing a coat which, he said, was "calculated to attract attention." He seemed to regard this as a sin of exquisitely heinous proportions; and I want to know why?

I believe I sense the answer but just for fun I shall speculate a bit. It is not because men dislike brilliant colors that they object to their women wearing them. It is because colors attract the eye and no male man of Anglo-Saxon persuasion wants the eyes of any man but himself to follow his wife.

It's odd; but the Latin races, though more jealous than the Anglo-Saxon, so love color for its own sake that their men make no objection to their women gawking themselves as gaily as ever they choose. No wonder we are a dun, neurotic, unemotional nation. We eschew the beautiful as though it were a sin to please the eye. I've always wanted a peacock blue hat, and I know I'd wear one well on account of my dark skin; but the thought of the consternation in my husband's eyes when first he saw me in that lid is an effectual inhibition on the gratification of my taste.

Once a friend of mine who possesses a husband with most of the virtues, but who is obsessed by the fear that somebody will make remarks about the members of his family indulged in a life-long craving and purchased a ruby velvet evening coat. She wore it once. Her husband almost passed out of the body, not the play house—when he saw it. When they got home he asked her "WHY" she had bought that coat.

"Because," she explained, "I've wanted one all my life." "But, I heard several men COMMENT on it," protested her aggrieved husband. "They said it was loud."

She gave it away, but not without a sigh and a furtive tear or two. And now she goes about in coats that are either tan or gray.

What I am getting at is this: Why is it a sin to invite comment? Isn't there comment and comment? If a woman loves pretty men will comment on the fact, and if she is ugly you can bet the comments will advertise the fact, and no husbandly objections will stay them.

Colors were made to give joy and for one with the American men would get over the buck argue produced by "comment" and let us women enjoy the colors we love. We'd be happier and healthier, and that's the straight.

And as to the men, when I see them going to business in knickerbockers made of gay velvets I'll believe there is hope for the race.

Editor Harry Hammond of Byron has elevated Senator Shortridge to the presidency.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

One may write a word, for instance in formulation of an editorial. Upon scrutiny the word may not be pleasing, nor suited to the purpose. Thereupon it is effaced, and a substitute found. One may complete the editorial, read it carefully, decide that the waste basket is the place for it. The world is no wiser, nor has it suffered any. It knows nothing of the episode when an editorial dies unprinted.

A man stands in a public place and utters his convictions. He is a minister. It may be assumed that he has thought out with care the idea he seeks to convey, and has clothed it with such skill as he may have at command. Its undesired words have been effaced, and substitutions made. As a whole, it has been pondered over, and the decision reached that the waste basket was not the place for it.

The minister delivers his address and shocks the conventionalities of creed by its content. He is informed that he must recant or retire. How could he recant? What would be the meaning of such an act?

In the first place it could not be a sincere act. It could be construed only as the stifling, not of an opinion, but of the impulse to make the opinion known. It would be looked upon as an effort to hold a place for which the individual was unfit. He would be unfit were he to maintain a doctrine opposed to that held and revered by the people who engaged him. He would be unfit if, still adhering to his beliefs, he professed to renounce them.

It is enough to make a person sick to observe the fury of the men who once advocated letting Europe alone, prevented the United States from taking a nation's part in the affairs of the world, and now shout for the immediate checking of France by America. They are a sorry lot of pretenders.

When such a man as Chesterton visits this country he is welcome. His message is listened to with respect, his foibles are amusing, and his gibes shine with good nature. The explanation is that Chesterton is a person of brains and achievement.

There come other lecturers from England. Mostly they are characterized by an amazing egotism. They have nothing of particular value to say, and such as they do say is delivered in so arrogant and superior a manner as to be vexatious. A little of it might be laughed at, but the amount purveyed is tiresome.

Come to mind the chap who says Californians will never accomplish anything creative in either literature or art until they get over their grasshopper trait of skipping about and their katydid habit of chirping cheerfulness. Possibly Powys never heard of Brete Harte, Joaquin Miller or Ambrose Bierce, each leaving a name that will be remembered long after his own.

His thought, as expressed in the same address, seems to be that California women are going to the bow-wows generally, largely because they live in a pleasant climate, eat meat, and ride in automobiles. It is not an especially valuable thought, but earns the cash.

There was a time early in the winter when the prospect was for an extremely wet season. The total was forced far above normal. Intervened weeks of sunshine, and then a few threatening clouds. These clouds have done but little at this writing but threaten. The total precipitation to date is far below normal.

The only safe way to count the rainfall is to inspect the gauge, for in advance it is more uncertain than the chicken still in the shell.

Few men have so figured as notable, and then, still living, fallen from sight and consideration, as the late Max Nordau. Probably the main surprise occasioned by announcement of his death was due to the fact that the average person believed that he had passed away long ago.

Nordau took a pessimistic view of life. He was unable to see good in the individual or in the aggregate, or in the facts of creation. Probably then he took his own descent into obscurity, even poverty, as proof that his morbid and forbidding philosophy was sound.

The French seem to be prepared for every contingency that might arise from a strike of German workmen in the Ruhr region. One feeling a friendly interest in the German workmen and the future of European industry, would be inclined to vote against a strike under prevailing conditions.

WATCHING THE PARADE

BY JOHN PILGRIM

My lady wife says there is something wrong with the man who—not being broke to the wide—let's his shoes run down at the heels.

Maybe she's right. I don't know. I do know that my own would run down at the heels if it were not for her conviction of sin. I forgot the confounded things and get into trouble with her. The Greek general who shines my shoes has a standing order to keep my heels straight. He gets a tip if he does, and the certainty that he will lose my business if he doesn't. I had rather have the heels replaced every week than listen to Mrs. Pilgrim's monologue on shoe heels just once.

Anyhow, there may be something in what she says.

A few weeks ago I was aimlessly rambling down the street. Immediately in front another man rambled. Because I had nothing more important to think about I thought about his heels. They were run down on either side, so that I wondered that he could limp along. Then I noticed that his trousers were not pressed. They were shiny, which is no disgrace in these days of high tailoring, but they were as wrinkled as flour sacks.

That is a disgrace when the trousers are worn by men who can afford to keep them pressed. When I caught up I saw that he could pay for trousers pressing if he wanted to. He had a diamond ring on one hand and a flashy pin in his tie, and a heavy gold watch chain. We rambled into the same cigar store and he paid for his smoke from a thick roll of stiffs. That night I met him at one of those hours of social torment which our wives all like and which most men detest and discovered that he was in the real estate business. I'm old-fashioned that way. I like to have the same faith in a real estate man that I have in my banker or my doctor.

"Some one told me you are in the market for a house," he said to me over the phone the next day. I lied. "I'm not," I said. "Never thought of it."

The reason why I was not in the market, so far as he was concerned, is that I cannot put faith in a man who carries a chunk of soft money that looked big enough to wad a cathode, wears a diamond ring, and lets his shoes run down at the heel. Maybe this is a prejudice, but it is it must be placed at Mrs. Pilgrim's feet. As a wreath and a commendation, by the way. For my run-down acquaintance fled town this morning. His debts sound like a reparation fund.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—?

ONE GREAT NEED

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc. (Copyright, 1923, by The Associated Newspapers)

There is reason for all of us—and particularly those of us in political office—to recall from time to time this passage out of the writings of the historian, Bancroft: "The world of mankind does not exist in fragments, nor can a country have an isolated existence. All men are brothers, and all are bondsmen for one another."

"All nations, too, are brothers, and each is responsible for that federative humanity which puts the ban of exclusion on none. New principles of government could not assert themselves in one hemisphere without affecting the other."

And, as supplementary to this, the psychologist Peters' more recent observation:

"The more you look into the matter the more clearly you will find that a man cannot be independent of his fellows, yet be strong. We are all interdependent, and the moment a man cuts himself off from the co-operation of his fellows he becomes as impotent as one of the lower animals."

"We do not and cannot work alone. We are all bound up into one organic whole, which includes within its comprehensive embrace all levels of society, all parts of the globe."

Strongly am I tempted to say at this moment there is no greater human need than general appreciation and acceptance of the truth of statements such as these.

Race prejudices are strong in the land, so are class animosities. People seem to think that the race to which they belong is inherently superior to all other races, and need have no concern as to those others, beyond adopting an attitude of condescension. Also people talk—and act—as though the particular social group in which they find themselves could safely disregard the rights and interests of other social groups.

We have in Bolshevik Russia a direfully impressive proof of how senseless such a notion is.

Bolshevism is a land of woe. And a land of woe it will remain until the leaders of the proletariat recognize that no one social group can prosper without the free and willing co-operation of other social groups. Class must work with class, not oppose, much less endeavor to exterminate, else misery is certain for all.

It may, indeed, be alleged that undue dominance by another class converted Russia into a proletarian realm. And assuredly preaching against class sovereignty should not be directed at the proletariat alone. The so-called capitalist class likewise has something to learn with regard to the interdependence of all human beings.

There is, too, the lesson to be learned of the interdependence of nations as well as of social groups within each nation. It is not a theoretical interdependence, but a practical, very, very vital one—as events during and since the world war have been painfully demonstrating.

But when will statesmen the world over acknowledge this and formulate their policies to make for international amity and solidarity rather than international strife and suffering? When will they recognize that only through international unity of action can the interests of their several nations best be served?

That time, clearly, has not yet arrived.

The vicar of a small town was returning home one Sunday evening when he came upon two young boys having a quarrel.

They were fighting violently, stopping now and again to shout abusively at each other, using very bad language.

Touching the smaller of the two boys on the shoulder, the vicar said: "Tut, tut, my little fellow, what ever would your mother say if she heard you using such wicked words?"

"Spect she would be very pleased, sir," answered the small boy.

"Rubbish!" answered the vicar, "you know she would not be pleased!"

"I think she would be, sir; she's stone deaf."

It takes self-control to enable a man to go on in the attic every time he feels like swearing.

Oldest World War Veteran Fought for U. S. in Mexican War

After almost driving officials to a state of frenzy, Lieutenant William N. Williams, a retired officer, induced them to give him a job during the late war in the Quartermaster's corps. He served in the Mexican war and in the Civil war, was in the battles of Cheat River, Shiloh, Stone River, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, and Salem Church. Then he served under Custer in the Indian wars.

The Unmistakable Evidences of Christ's Presence

OVERLOOKED BY THE PHARISEES AT THE FIRST ADVENT
NOW OVERLOOKED BY THE MODERN CLERGY

Do you know that He is now binding the invisible God of this world—Satan?

Do you know that Christ is the only panacea for the ills of human kind?

SULPHUR CLEARS

A PIMPLY SKIN

Apply Sulphur as Told When Your Skin Breaks Out

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist.

Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur and use it like cold cream.—Advertisement.

DRUGS EXCITE THE KIDNEYS, DRINK WATER

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink and belongs in every home, because by having a good kidney flushing any time. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.—Adv.

HEALING CREAM STOPS CATARRH

Clogged Air Passages Open at Once—Nose and Throat Clear

If your nostrils are clogged and your head stuffed because of catarrh or a cold, get Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this pure, antiseptic, germ destroying cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head and membranes. Instant relief.

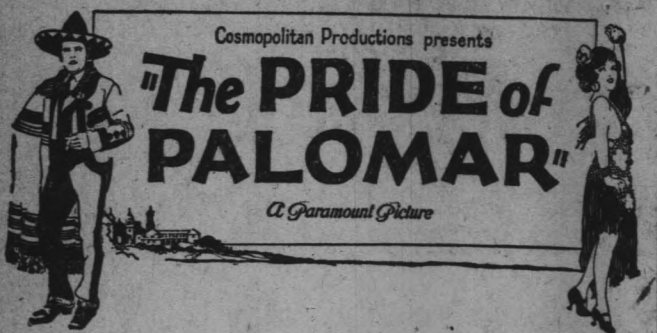

How good it feels. Your head is clear. Your nostrils are open. You breathe freely. No more hacking or snuffing. Head colds and catarrh yield like magic. Don't stay stuffed up, choked up and miserable. Relief is sure.—Adv.

NEW CHICKEN ARISTOCRACY APPEARS

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(United Press)—At the Madison Square Garden poultry show, which opened today, a new chicken aristocrat made its appearance. The new variety are called Chantrelles and now are brought forth after fifteen years' of study and breeding by a Trappist monk, Brother Wilfred, of the National Agricultural School, Quebec. The chickens are pure white and have no combs or wattles. Entries have been made by Lord D'Arby of England, who has sent pit games and bantams, and chickens also will come from all over the United States and from almost every province in Canada.

STATE YELLOW PINE TO BE TESTED

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 26.—Twenty-six thousand feet of western yellow pine from Weed, Calif., has been received by the Forest Products Laboratory, U. S. Forest Service, Madison, Wisconsin, to be made up into one thousand boxes and crates, which will be tested to determine their fitness to stand the strains and rough knocks of shipment. These tests will furnish information on the most practical thickness of box shooks, the best methods of nailing, the most advisable forms of metal strapping or other binding, and will suggest improvements in crate designs.

Each box will be tested in the giant revolving drum, and computations will be made as to how many hard knocks the boxes will stand before breaking open and spilling their contents. These data will be turned over to the shippers of the country to aid them in the elimination of waste through container breakage. The importance of this laboratory activity is indicated by the fact that the box and crate industry is the second largest wood-using industry in the United States and consumes approximately four and one-half billion feet, or 18 per cent, of the wood required annually for the manufacture of wooden products.

Foley's Friendly Fancies

JAMES W. FOLEY

That used to roar in your boyish ears but a little dash of spray. That fell so light you could hardly hear a dozen feet away? Were the corn rows only half as long as they were in the long ago. When you measured them with aching arms and the weight of a heavy hoe?

When you went back to the old home place had the mill pond dwindled down?

Was Main street only a muddy track in the heart of a sleepy town? And the well that was fathoms, fathoms deep, with its wheel and creaking chain,

Did it seem to you like a shrunken thing when you looked at it again? Was something gone of the bygone days, from the sod and the arch of the sky

That we used to see when we played as boys in the old days—you and I?

Nay, Heart, the mountain rises high as it did of yore; the hill Was a river once and the boys near by see a raging river still. The well is fathoms, fathoms deep and the apples ripe and red; The sod is cool and green and soft, and the sky up overhead Is blue and clear, and the days are rare and glad as they used to be— But where is the Heart of the olden time—has it brought it back with thee?

After being conducted through an old English church by the verger, a visitor was so pleased with the official's courtesy that he insisted on giving him half a crown. The man shook his head sadly. "Thank you, sir," he said, "but it's against the rules."

"I'm sorry for that," said the visitor, about to return the coin to his pocket.

"But," added the verger, "if I were to find a coin lying on the floor it would not be against the rules for me to pick it up."

MILK DRINKING IS ON INCREASE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Milk drinking in the United States has increased nearly 17 percent in the United States during the last ten years, statistics compiled by the department of agriculture show. The department declines to state whether prohibition is responsible. Health departments of 356 cities sent in figures representing more than 32,000,000 people and these show that a daily average of seven-tenths of a pint is consumed for every man, woman and child now, as against six-tenths of a pint ten years ago.

Southern states show a smaller consumption than other sections of the country, particularly New England, where it reaches its crest. Cities of less than 50,000 people use less milk per person than cities of greater size, with the exception of those under 5,000, where milk consumption leads the list, the figures show.

BOAST 75 YEARS OF WEDDED PEACE

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 26.—Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan M. Shainline, of Abrahams, near here, were wed 72 years ago and claim the distinction of being the only couple in the United States who have never had a quarrel—and lived together that long.

The couple were married on April 17, 1851, and this April plan to celebrate their 72nd wedding anniversary. Shainline is 93 years old and Mrs. Shainline is in her 92nd year.

"We have never had a quarrel in all that time," Mrs. Shainline declares. "The trouble with young people now is that they don't think what they are doing. There is too much fashion. The poor girl wants to do as the rich. Fifty years ago we never heard of a divorce—people didn't leave each other then." Shainline's rule for happiness is "don't worry—worry is fatal." "You must make up your mind to be happy and contented with things as they come and don't worry."

"It's folly to quarrel and nothing has ever caused us to disagree," Shainline says.

Did you ever meet a man who didn't talk shop more than was necessary?
